DAILY ATHLYNE

"Aye sir." The policeman, who at first sight had been a grave, elderly man, had by now recognized him as a gentleman.

"Will you come in the car? It's all right, I'll go slow."

"Thank you sir. I've had a deal of walkin' the day!" When the man was in the tonneau Athlyne who had been thinking of what was to be done said to him effably:

"It was silly of me going at such a pace. But I wanted my wife to see how the new car would." He had a purpose in saying this: to emphasize to Joy the necessity of not mentioning her name. It was the only way to keep off the subject when they should get to the station. Joy turned away her head. She did not wish either man to see her blushing at hearing word. She took the hint; silence was her cue.

At the station Joy sat in the car whilst Athlyne went inside with the officer. The sergeant was a grave, elderly man, not unkindly. He too recognized, but at once, that the chauffeur was a gentleman. The air of distinction about Athlyne which no one, especially an official, could fail to appreciate. He was not surprised when he read the card which Athlyne handed to him. He frowned a little and scratched his head.

"I fear this'll be a bit awkward my lord. To come from the Border and you'll have to attend the summons at New Galloway. I dinna want to inconvenience you and her ladyship but—"

"Will it not be possible to let the car go on. My wife has to meet her father and mother who are coming up to Ambleside to-night, and they will be disappointed. Her mother is an invalid and is coming from Italy. I shall be really greatly obliged if it can be managed."

The sergeant shook his head and said slowly:

"This is a fine car. A valuable commodity to take out of the jurisdiction and into a foreign country." Athlyne had already taken out his pocket-book. Fortunately he had provided himself well with money before coming north.

"I paid a thousand pounds for the car. Will it not suit if I leave that amount in your custody?" The official was impressed.

"Look! man what I dae want is a thousand pounds in a wee bit station like this, or carvin' it about in me claes. No! na! if ye'll de-pot it, a ten pound note for the guarantee I'm thinkin' 'twill be a' reet. But how can the leddy get awa; ye'll hae to bide till morn's morn."

"Oh that all right, officer, she's a licensed driver. Unhappily she has not got her license with her. She left it in Ambleside as I was driving north."

"He said this to avert her being questioned on the neglect; in which case there might be more trouble about the peace."

"Och! man what's a' reet! A man ax her mae forbye she mayn't hae the license about her. Wimmen is feckless cattle an' aye."

might get into any one of many forms of trouble if only from her anxiety to reach home before the arrival of her parents. She was, after all, not a practiced driver and was in control of the very latest type of machine of whose special mechanism she could know nothing. If she should break down far from any town she would be in the most difficult position possible; a girl alone in a country she did not know. And all this apart from the possibility of accident, of mischance of driving, of the act of other travelers, of cattle on the road; of any of the countless mishaps which can be with so swift and heavy a machine as a motor. And then should she not arrive in time, what pain or unpleasantness might there not be with her father. He would be upset and anxious at first, naturally. He might be angry with her for going out on such a long excursion with a man alone; he would most certainly be angry with him for taking her, for allowing her to go. And at such a time too, just when everything was working—had worked towards the end he aimed at. He knew that Colonel Ostry was an experienced driver, and had been incensed with him for a neglect which under the circumstances was absolute discourtesy. And here he bitterly took himself to task for his selfishness—realized now that it was such—in wanting to make sure of Joy's love before consulting her father, or even explaining to him the cause of his hesitating under a false name. Might it not be too late to set that right now?

And there he was, away in Scotland, kicking his heels in a petty little police station, while the poor girl would have to bear all the brunt of the pain and unpleasantness. And that after a long, wearying, wearisome drive of a hundred miles, with her dear heart eternally thumping away lest she might lose in her race against time. And what was worse still that it would all follow a day which he did not attempt to doubt had been, up to the time of the arrest, one of unqualified happiness.

"A sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things."

The contract would be terrible. He knew what the thought of it was to him; what would it be to her! Her sweet, gentle, loving heart would be hurt, crushed to the very dust.

He sprang to his feet and walked about the room, all noticing the sergeant was watching him in surprise and suspicion, he controlled himself.

He talked with the sergeant for a while generally. It was positively necessary that there should not be any doubt in the mind of the latter when the Sheriff should arrive. This episode took the strain from his mind for a time. He expressed to the officer how anxious he was to get on and interested in the worthy man so much that he went over to the hotel to get a time-table. There Athlyne learned that it would be practically impossible for him to get to Ambleside that night. Not even if he could get a special train at Carlisle—there was no possibility of getting one from a nearer place. When he asked the sergeant his opinion, that worthy individual condescended to smile:

"Loch! man they don't run specials on the Border. As much as they can do to run a few trains a day. A'm thinkin' that if ye asked the stationmaster anywhere along the Dumfriesshire and Galloway line for a special he'd hae ye in the staff-house, or he'd be haein' himself!" Athlyne went back to his seat; once again the pendulum of his thoughts swung to and fro.

He was now face to face with one certainty amongst many possibilities: Whatever he did he could not give any immediate help to Joy. She, poor soul, must fend for herself and if need be, fight her battle alone. He could only try to make it up to her afterwards. And yet what could he do for her? What more give to her who had already all that was his? And here he lost himself in memories of the immediate past, when he had merged into dreams of the future which has no end.

Not Many Store-Sales Are Uninfluenced by Store-Advertising!

The store-sales to-day that are uninfluenced, directly or indirectly, by store-advertising will not have amounted to ten per cent. of the total business of the day. By the direct influence of advertising is meant the sales of articles specifically advertised. By the indirect influence of advertising is meant the articles sold that are not specifically advertised, but are displayed to the customers who are drawn to the store BY THE ADVERTISED ARTICLES. In the latter case, as surely as in the first, the advertising must be credited with the sale.

Observant merchants know that this is true. They should gain courage from the knowledge to strengthen their advertising campaigns to the point of matching their store-hopes and plans.

Relieved of $40.
A holdup game is said to have been worked in New Canaan, Sunday night. Two Italians notified Chief Weed that they had been accosted by three strangers, and, at the pistol's point, relieved of about $40 and their watches. After the men had taken their valuables, they walked back of the two foreigners, driving them along the road until in the vicinity of Weed's Pond. Here they told them to keep on going or run the risk of getting a bullet. The Italians claim that the men were jewelry peddlers and had been in the village for a few days disposing of their trinkets.

Hurt by Dynamite.
Frank Hawley was terribly injured by an explosion of dynamite, while blasting in Weston on Saturday. One hand was nearly torn off, one eye badly injured, and recovery is considered doubtful.

Fines on Autoists.
Four fines were imposed, together with costs, on drivers, for infractions of the automobile law. Two automobilists whom Constable Leonard ordered to stop, did not do so, but fled. The constable followed and is proposed to go after him. The other was a New Yorker.

Thrown From Carriage.
Mrs. LeRoy Monroe of Darien, was thrown from a carriage at Pound Ridge, Sunday afternoon, and severely injured. The accident was due to the horse becoming frightened by an automobile.

Three Horses Had Glanders.
Three horses of William A. Shantz, a market gardener of Springdale, have been put to death because they had contracted glanders.

Water for Darien.
That Darien will have a street water system of its own in the near future seems very likely. The Noroton Water Co. has closed contracts for some excellent watershed land in New Canaan, and is getting ready to go ahead with the business of distributing water to consumers. John D. Crimmins and Anson Phelps Stokes own a controlling interest in the Noroton company.

Recently, E. W. Pinney, proprietor of the Falls Village Inn, was arrested on the charge of violating the excise law against selling liquor without a license. He pleaded guilty and was fined $202 and costs, which amounted to $202. This amount he paid.

Guilt of Non-Support.
The State vs. Ernest Johnson case went to the jury at Litchfield after a two days' hearing. A verdict of guilty was returned. Johnson, whose present residence is in Norfolk, was charged with non-support of his wife with whom he has not been living for about a year. Case appealed.
